摘要

About the role:
#LI-Hybrid

As a Senior Manager, Analytical Operations Austria, you will lead, coach, and manage a team of analytical experts who are responsible for enabling the release of clinical material, conducting stability studies, and supporting submissions. You will also be actively involved in a team to enable the consolidation of the site strategy for Analytical Operations Austria.

You will need a proven track record of leading and managing teams of analytical experts, a solid understanding of analytical methods, techniques, and instruments, as well as GMP regulations and guidelines, a demonstrated ability to solve complex analytical problems, troubleshoot issues, and implement solutions, a high level of initiative, creativity, and innovation.

About the Role

Key responsibilities:

- Demonstrate an exceptional level of creativity and inventiveness.
- Apply and/or develop advanced technologies, scientific principles, theories and concepts.
- Act often independently to uncover and resolve issues associated with the development and implementation of operational programs. Plan R&D programs and recommend technological application programs to accomplish long-range objectives. Work is checked only upon effectiveness of results achieved, which normally require a long-term perspective. Virtually self-supervisory.
- Strategic and/or management interface.
- Provide technical guidance and counsel for other professionals and represent the organization in external discussions and technical forums.
- Provide leadership direction, determination and development of solution approaches by coordinating multiple resources to solve complex problems.

Essential Requirements:

- Strong decision making: makes decisions independently, able to handle several activities at a time and ensures current good manufacturing practice (cGMP).
- Influence: Proactively identifies and resolves conflict situations, drives cultural evolution and change management, leads assigned functional sub-teams, assess, consolidates and negotiates internal resource needs for the team.
- Experience Background: Successfully demonstrated several years as a senior expert / manager, recognized expertise in a specific area and broader scientific knowledge as well as a strategic background.
- Communication: excellent communication / presentation skills, advanced coaching and mentoring skills.
