Step into a role where your strategic vision and scientific expertise will directly shape the future of medical excellence at Novartis. As a Medical Excellence Sr. Manager, you 'll lead high-impact projects, collaborate with thought leaders, and drive operational success across global teams. Your work will empower innovation, elevate standards, and make a meaningful difference for patients and stakeholders worldwide.

About the Role

Key Responsibilities

- Define and drive scientifically sound, business-driven project strategies for assigned programs.
- Guide and lead teams to achieve program goals, resolve issues, and plan contingencies.
- Oversee operational management, including project planning, execution, and documentation.
- Manage project budgets and schedules, ensuring adherence to objectives and performance standards.
- Identify project bottlenecks and propose effective solutions to maintain progress.
- Act as liaison with alliance partners and external thought leaders to ensure stakeholder requirements are met.
- Represent the area as a core member in global project teams, shaping scientific strategy for product development.

Essential Requirements

- Medical Degree (preferred)
- Proven experience in cross-cultural environments and collaborating across boundaries.
- Demonstrated expertise in project management and operational execution.
- Strong background in regulatory submissions and compliance.
- Ability to lead cross-functional teams and drive strategic objectives.
- Excellent interpersonal communication and stakeholder management skills.
- Proficiency in resource allocation, risk management, and time management.

Desirable Requirements

- Experience leading global scientific strategy for product development and regulatory submissions.
- Advanced proficiency in clinical research and innovation within cross-functional teams.
