Job title: GSOC Senior Analyst

Join our Global Security Operations Centre (GSOC) team to safeguard Novartis' people and assets worldwide. As a Senior Analyst, you will transform real-time threat intelligence into actionable insights, enabling informed decisions and proactive risk mitigation. This role is critical to maintaining operational resilience and supporting secure travel, executive protection, and emergency communications.

About the Role

Major accountabilities:

- Monitor global threat intelligence and security systems to identify and assess risks impacting Novartis operations.
- Deliver timely, accurate alerts, threat assessments, and incident reports to support business continuity and decision-making.
- Coordinate emergency notifications and crisis response workflows using approved platforms.
- Provide secure travel support by evaluating itineraries against geopolitical risks and recommending mitigation strategies.
- Ensure compliance with ISO 27001 and EN 50518 standards through structured documentation and audit readiness.
- Maintain continuity of operations via comprehensive shift handovers and accurate incident logging.
- Support executive protection helpline and manage sensitive communications with discretion.
- Collaborate with internal and external stakeholders during critical events to ensure effective multi-agency coordination.

Minimum Requirements:

- Bachelor ' s degree in Security Management, Risk Analysis, Information Security, or related field (or equivalent experience).
- Minimum 3-5 years of experience in GSOC operations, threat intelligence, or security monitoring.
- Strong knowledge of ISO 27001 Annex A controls and EN 50518 standards.
- Proficiency in security systems (CCTV/VMS, GPS tracking, alarm monitoring) and emergency communication platforms.
- Excellent analytical, communication, and decision-making skills under time-sensitive conditions.
- Ability to work in a 24x7 rotational shift environment and maintain strict confidentiality.
