摘要

As Director, Portfolio Scientific Communications at Novartis, you will shape the communication and education of emerging scientific evidence, as a result enhancing HCP understanding of the data to improve patient care worldwide. This role supports a global therapeutic portfolio and is suited to experienced scientific communication leaders with deep expertise in Oncology or Neuroscience. You will lead end to end scientific communication strategies - spanning scientific narrative development, publications, congresses, and medical education - working closely with clinical development, medical affairs, and external medical experts. Your work will directly to improve clinical understanding and impact patient care.

Location: London, UK / Barcelona, Spain #LI-Hybrid

About the Role

Responsibilities:

- Lead end to end global scientific communication strategies across Oncology or Neuroscience portfolios.
- Define scientific narratives, statements, and lexicon aligned with therapeutic area and asset strategies.
- Develop and execute global publication plans across the asset lifecycle, ensuring quality, impact, and timeliness.
- Lead congress scientific communications, including data interpretation, narrative development, and global readiness activities.
- Partner with medical, development, research, and insights teams to deliver integrated scientific communication strategies.
- Provide matrix leadership to cross functional publication teams and external agency partners.
- Ensure compliance with publication, medical education, and regulatory standards across all scientific communication activities.
- Drive innovative approaches and pilots to enhance effectiveness, efficiency, and stakeholder engagement.
- Measure and track the impact of scientific communications, using insights to continuously refine strategy and execution.
- Manage agency relationships, budgets, and vendor performance to deliver high quality outcomes on time.

Essential for the role:

- Extensive experience in scientific communications within Oncology or Neuroscience in the pharmaceutical or healthcare industry.
- Proven leadership in developing and executing global publication and medical education strategies across the asset lifecycle.
- Advanced scientific degree in life sciences, medicine, pharmacy, or a related discipline.
- Strong ability to translate complex clinical data into clear, compelling scientific narratives for diverse audiences.
- Demonstrated success working in global, cross functional, matrix environments.
- Deep understanding of publication ethics, medical education standards, and regulatory requirements.
- Strategic mindset with the ability to balance innovation, quality, compliance, and executional excellence.
- Excellent written and spoken English communication skills with strong stakeholder influencing capability.

Desirable for the role:

- Experience supporting assets across the life cycle within Oncology or Neuroscience portfolios.
- Experience leading global congress strategies and high impact scientific communication initiatives.
