Ready to shape how Novartis understands the competitive landscape? As the Associate Director, Therapeutic Area (Platforms/Emerging technologies (including RLT)), Enterprise Competitive Intelligence, you will lead a high - performing team to deliver timely, relevant, and high - quality competitive intelligence (CI) that informs our pipeline, portfolio, and enterprise strategy, in a specific Therapeutic Area. You will partner closely with leaders across Biomedical Research, Development, and our United States and International commercial organizations to uncover trends, white - space opportunities, and strategic risks. In addition, you will also serve as the single point of contact for a designated business unit, you will curate intelligence, translate it into clear implications, and guide decision - making at key governance forums. You will also champion modern data and analytics—including artificial intelligence (AI) - enabled tools—to build a best - in - class intelligence capability and centralized repository. By empowering and developing talent in Hyderabad and fostering a culture of collaboration and knowledge sharing, you will turn insight into impact for patients worldwide.

About the Role

ECI Strategic Visioning and Execution

- Articulate and drive vision, supporting enterprise goals and priorities.
- Serve on the ECI Leadership Team representing both specific TA and the designated Unit perspective.
- Lead change management efforts, including active sponsorship, clear communication, and maintaining focus on enterprise-wide benefits.
- Bring in industry best practices and disruptive ideas to strengthen the practice of CI.

Stakeholder Engagement and Collaboration as a Strategic Partner

- Ensure key customers of CI are well-served, trust the data quality, and see intelligence as a foundation for developing key insights.
- Curate TA-specific intelligence, formulate initial implications, and facilitate discussions with stakeholders.

Governance and Objectivity

- Ensure high quality CI is delivered with accuracy, timeliness, and relevance, serving all business units impartially and without bias.
- Review CI and insights developed for key internal governance bodies (e.g. Discovery & Translational Board and the Innovation Management Board).

Technological Acumen and Innovation

- Champion the modernization of CI data systems and the integration of AI capabilities to enable smarter, faster decision-making.

- Encourage experimentation and iterative development, with a focus on transparency and strategic prioritization of new capabilities.

Talent Development and Empowerment

- Lead a team providing timely and reliable TA CI to relevant internal stakeholders
- Identify, coach, attract, develop, and retain top talents; partner with P&O leadership to develop people strategy (e.g. organization development, performance, career development)
- Foster an environment that supports employee development & support them in times of change

Essential Requirements

- Advanced degree (PhD or MBA preferred) with leadership experience in Competitive Intelligence in pharma/ life sciences / Biotech sector.
- Minimum 12 years of experience spanning CI, consulting, banking, or relevant sector roles.
- Deep understanding of the global biopharma landscape, including assets, companies, and emerging technologies.
- Strong ability to influence, challenge, and collaborate with senior leaders and cross - functional teams.
- Excellent oral and written communication skills with the ability to simplify complex information.
- Proven capability to lead and develop high - performing teams with diverse scientific and commercial backgrounds.
- Strong financial and business acumen, including strategic thinking and effective prioritization.
- Experience modernizing CI data systems and applying AI - enabled analytics; congress and global stakeholder engagement exposure.
